Does Sally know how to make a report?

* "To make a report" is a common collocation we use when we go to the police to tell them about a crime.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Peter: Do you know how much further it is? If I had known it was this far I'd have worn my sneakers.
- Sally: No it's just over there. I'm really anxious about my investments.
- Peter: Well, let see what the cops say. My feet hurt. I wish I'd put different shoes on this morning.
- Sally: Hi, I'm here to make a report. Possible identity theft. I don't know but I've got this whopping huge Visa bill ...
- Police Officer: First you have to report that to Visa ma'am.
- Sally: I did.
- Peter: Maybe we shouldn't have come here. I kind of wish we hadn't.
- Police Officer: Is there any other matter I can help you with?
- Sally: Do you know if there have been cases of identity theft in this area?
- Peter: Don't you think we should leave now Sally!
- Police Officer: What a pretty name. May I ask why you are concerned about identity theft?
- Peter: She won the lottery ...
- Sally: ... and I won a million dollars. I am worried about my investments and whoever used my Visa may have access to other information. Sometimes I wish I hadn't won the lottery.
- Police Officer: Do you think you could go back to your bank branch and ask about any suspicious activity?
- Sally: Yes, of course ... I wish I could make this situation disappear.
- Peter: I wish I weren't so hungry. I wish I had eaten breakfast this morning!

Learning Points

Talking about Wishes

You use wish, plus the past form of the verb or the past participle of the verb to talk about imaginary situations in the past, present or future.

Wishes and sentences in the second and third conditional infer that what you want is probably not possible, or for some reason impossible and that you regret what happened in the past.

You use wish + Simple Past to talk about wishes in the present or future.

For example:

Sometimes I wish I weren't so hungry.

(I am hungry.)

You use wish + had + past participle to talk about wishes about past situations.

For example:

I wish I'd put different shoes on this morning.

(I didn't put different shoes on this morning.)

Examples:

- I kind of wish we hadn't come here.
- Sometimes I wish I hadn't won the lottery.
- Yes of course ... I wish I could make this situation disappear.
- I wish I had eaten breakfast this morning!
- I wish I weren't so hungry.

Learning Points

Asking for Clarification

You ask for clarification when you want more details of what the other person is talking about.

You can emphasize a point by asking rhetorical questions.

You ask for clarification when it is not clear what the other person is referring to. You ask the other person to be more specific by giving you more information.

You can use a question at the beginning of a statement or question to ask for clarification like: Don't you think ... ?

Questions within sentences are called embedded questions.

Example:

Simple question: Who told you?

Embedded question: Can you remember who told you?

Look at the chart below for an explanation on how to make embedded questions.

Main Question	Embedded Question
Do you know ...	what/where/when/who/ ... ?
Do you remember ...	what/where/when/who/ ... ?
Can you tell me ...	what/where/when/who/ ... ?
Could you tell me ...	what/where/when/who/ ... ?
May I ask you ...	what/where/when/who/ ... ?

Examples:

- Do you know if there have been cases of identity theft in this area?
- Don't you think we should leave now Sally!
- May I ask why you are concerned about identity theft?
- Do you think you could go back to your bank branch and ask about any suspicious activity?
